In brief remarks, Minister Manickchand said the smart classroom will allow for technology-infused learning noting that it will not only enhance the way teachers deliver lessons but the way students learn. She highlighted that the commissioning of the smart classroom is in keeping with the ministry's vision of incorporating technology to transform the education sector.

The implementation of smart classrooms is integral to creating equity and access across the country. She also commended the institution for its blended approach to education delivery.

A new Board of Governors of St. Stanislaus College was also installed Thursday afternoon. Minister Manickchand encouraged the board members to serve in the best interest of the school. (Extracted and modified from DPI)
